Administrative/Biographical Data

The academic catalogs detail the classes available for students of several iterations of the institution during the period between 1884 to the present. Located near downtown Cochran, Ga, MGC had many names; The New Ebenezer College (1884-1898), Middle Georgia Agricultural and Mechanical Junior College (1919-1929), and Middle Georgia College (1929-2012). The college grew several times throughout the years taking on a Dublin branch in 1984, and in 2007 the Georgia Aviation Technical College in Eastman was merged with MGC to form a 3-campus college. Macon Junior College, opened its classrooms in 1968 as a 2-year college until 1987; was renamed Macon College from 1987-1997; and Macon State College from 1997-2012. 2012 brought the final merger with Macon State College and Middle Georgia College to form Middle Georgia State College, later Middle Georgia State University in 2015.

Scope and Content
