The Bachelor of Arts Degree in History has two tracks - History track and History Education track.

The traditional history track is aimed at students interested in careers in the arts, law, government and community service, historical interpretation and curatorship, as well as graduate education. Students in the traditional history track undertake a program of study that provides them with the skills, knowledge and training necessary to be effective in the 21st century workforce.

The history education track prepares students to teach history at the high-school level. According to the Georgia Professional Standards Commission, the social sciences, which includes history, was the state's third highest teacher-shortage area in fiscal 2005. The history education track offers Central Georgia's prospective teachers a combination of content knowledge and pedagogical expertise to address the need for well-qualified history teachers in the region's high schools.

History (B.A.)

History majors learn to analyze and draw objective conclusions. While history is the study and interpretation of past events, the research and analytical skills learned in history courses are applicable in nearly every field of professional endeavor.

Traditionally, history majors have also been employed in historical site interpretation, research, historic preservation, or archival and museum work. Many history majors also find careers in the electronic and print media, politics, government service, non-profit organizations, and lobbying, among other areas. In addition to developing an understanding of history, a history degree builds and enhances required academic skills for successful completion of graduate study or law school, making the traditional history track a preferred pre-law major. In addition to the traditional history track, Macon State College offers a track aimed at preparing students to teach history at the secondary education level.

Students are not permitted to use courses in which a grade of D was earned to satisfy requirements specific to the history program.
