

What Can You do with an English Major besides Teach?

Do you love to read? Do you enjoy the challenge of writing? Have you thought about majoring in English, but you just can't see yourself teaching?

Then join us for our "What Can You do with an English Major besides Teach?" panel. This year's panelists include a law school student, a creative writer, and a communication manager for a national non-profit. Each panelist will describe their career and how an English major can lead to it. Time will be provided for questions.

This event will be offered virtually through Microsoft TEAMS on Wednesday, November 11, at 3:30p.m.

Visit the link below to access the event.

<http://bit.ly/3nglishMGA>

Please contact Dr. Sharon Colley at sharon.colley@mga.edu for more information.

Katharine Gripp

Gripp is the Communications Manager for the nonprofit National Novel Writing Month (NaNoWriMo). Here, she helps writers bring their stories to life. (Professional Writing Concentration)

Rachel Ness-Maddox

Maddox graduated from MGA in Spring 2018 with a B.A. in English and Creative Writing minor. She is now a third-year law student at Mercer. (Pre-Law Concentration)

Andy Davidson

Davidson's debut novel, In the Valley of the Sun, was a finalist for the 2017 Bram Stoker Award for Superior Achievement in a First Novel, This is Horror's Novel of the Year, a 2018 Silver Falchion, and the 2018 Edinburgh International Book Festival's First Book Award. His second novel, The Boatman's Daughter, is currently available from MCD x FSG Originals. He holds an MFA in Fiction from Ole Miss and teaches English and Creative Writing at MGA. (Creative Writing Concentration)