Thursday, February 2	College Town Film Series Description: A collaboration of Middle Georgia State University, Wesleyan College, and Mercer University, the annual College Town Film Series brings students, faculty, and the public together to view and discuss educational and entertaining films with a common theme. A professor from each institution hosts discussions of each film. This year's theme is "Brainwashed." Videodrome (1983) will be featured on February 2. Discussion will be led by Dr. Patrick Brennan of Middle Georgia State University. The film features the president of a trashy TV channel, Max Renn, who is desperate for new programming to attract viewers. When he happens upon "Videodrome," a TV show dedicated to gratuitous torture and punishment, Max sees a potential hit and broadcasts the show on his channel. However, after his girlfriend auditions for the show and never returns, Max investigates the truth behind Videodrome and discovers that the graphic violence may not be as fake as he thought. All films will be screened at the historic Douglass Theater, 355 Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard in downtown Macon. Students with college ID are admitted free. Admission for faculty/staff and the general public is $5. Tickets may be purchased at the door on the night of each screening. More Information Here

College Town Film Series

Description: A collaboration of Middle Georgia State University, Wesleyan College, and Mercer University, the annual College Town Film Series brings students, faculty, and the public together to view and discuss educational and entertaining films with a common theme. A professor from each institution hosts discussions of each film. This year's theme is "Brainwashed."

Jo Jo Rabbit (2019)* will be featured on February 9. Discussion will be led by Evey Wilson Wetherbee & Rachel Schaff of Mercer. The film is a World War II satire that follows Jojo, a Nazi youth whose worldview is turned upside down when he discovers that his mother is hiding a Jewish girl in their attic. Aided by only his imaginary friend – Adolph Hitler – Jojo must confront his blind nationalism.

All films will be screened at the historic Douglass Theater, 355 Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard in downtown Macon. Students with college ID are admitted free. Admission for faculty/staff and the general public is $5. Tickets may be purchased at the door on the night of each screening.
