As I start my second year as president at Middle Georgia State College, I am excited to report that we are on track to becoming a state university—one that is nimble enough to serve a diverse population, which sorely needs bachelor’s and master’s degrees in today’s changing economy. Your support is vital to our continued focus on student success and shaping the cultural and economic life of this region and state.

This year, we have found unity of purpose across our five campuses in Cochran, Dublin, Eastman, Macon, and Warner Robins. Living our core values of Stewardship, Engagement, Adaptability, and Learning, we work together toward a common vision: we transform individuals and their communities through extraordinary higher learning.

We have opened new facilities, and our sports teams are competing in the four-year National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. We continue to foster innovation, by adopting new technologies to support distance, hybrid, and online learning. We are collaborating with the public and private sectors—in partnerships with organizations such as the Georgia Public Safety Training Center and GEICO.

Today, as we prepare for institutional re-accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges, we are poised to become a university that will serve the region and the people of Georgia for years to come. We have proposed initial graduate programs to the University System of Georgia that meet the needs of the area’s high-demand fields, such as technology and healthcare—the approval of which will result in university status.

The opportunities before us are enhanced by your investment in our institution and our communities. As we reach new milestones, we cannot thank you enough for your support. Your generosity is shaping a great future for our students and our communities.

Christopher Blake, PhD
President
There were many successes and milestones during 2014 that made it a banner year for Middle Georgia State College and the Middle Georgia State College Foundation. This effort took many forms, from new leadership for the college and foundation, setting new records in fundraising and scholarship awards, to creating a memorable inauguration and gala.

The foundation raised a record high of more than $750,000 in the annual campaign while awarding $307,000 in scholarships to 322 students. More scholarships, in number and dollar amounts, are being awarded than at any time in the college’s history. These figures represent the foundation’s direct commitment to increasing our support for the college and to the broad range of students it serves. This is a direct result of private giving.

You have translated your hard work, success and generosity into a meaningful, sustainable resource for our students. You play a significant role in helping the foundation keep its promise to the college and we are infinitely grateful for your contribution. Thank you.

This year, the college unveiled its Greatness campaign, a recruitment strategy that challenges current and prospective students to find their greatness at Middle Georgia State. In the pages of this report you will read the stories of four individuals, each one having tapped into their greatness and accomplishing remarkable things as a result of their connection to Middle Georgia State.

The future for Middle Georgia State is promising and full of opportunity. As the college stands poised to become a university, we stand ready to continue to serve and support this great institution, the students it serves, and the community of Middle Georgia.

We are tremendously grateful to you for investing in Middle Georgia State’s most precious resource – its students.

Scholarship Honors Memory of Music Professor

Dr. Charles L. Quinn’s best known legacy is perhaps as founder, conductor and artistic director of the Ocmulgee Symphony Orchestra and its outreach program, the Ocmulgee Symphony Academy.

As described in a Macon Telegraph article, Quinn – who was a music faculty member at what is now Middle Georgia State College – brought top-level performers each musical season from throughout the U.S. to perform in the Hawkinsville Opera House and later at locations in Warner Robins, Cordele and Macon.

Attending those concerts regularly is how Cay Dykes of Cochran became good friends with Quinn and his family. Quinn died unexpectedly in 2011 at age 52.

“It was his dream to nurture young musicians.”

“He was a wonderful, quiet, small giant kind of a person,” said Dykes. “He wanted to make sure his program at the college grew.”

Born in Atlanta and reared in Birmingham, Alabama, Quinn moved to Cochran in 2004 to become the director of instrumental music at (now) Middle Georgia State. An accomplished trumpeter, Quinn had earned his doctorate in music from Louisiana State University. He was a member of Phi Kappa Lambda, a music honor society.

Quinn’s mother, Sandra Nash, who lives in Birmingham, established a scholarship in memory of her son through the Middle Georgia State College Foundation, to be awarded to qualified students majoring in music.

“I wanted to establish the scholarship because my son had felt there was a need for student financial assistance to help build the music program,” Nash said. “There were few music scholarships available, and that naturally made it more difficult to attract students, both those interested in performance and music education. My son had been working to get more funding for students, so I established the scholarship in his name really just to continue his efforts to achieve this goal.”

Dykes helped Quinn’s family establish the scholarship and has become a local spokesperson for it, most recently at a luncheon held for recipients of and donors to the various scholarships awarded through the Foundation.

Dykes noted during her luncheon remarks that Quinn’s entire college and post-graduate education – from his bachelor’s degree through his doctorate – was paid for through scholarships.

So he would no doubt be pleased with the endowed scholarship established in his memory that will help other students in the same manner.

“It was his dream to nurture young musicians,” Dykes said. “That’s what this scholarship is doing.”

Scholarships are Rewards for Her Extra Hard Work

To hear Holly Goodman tell it, she’s known since she was 3 years old that she wanted to be a nurse.

“I would chase my siblings around and every time they would get hurt I would bring out my little bag of Band-Aids,” said the 20-year-old student from Byron.

“Things that bothered normal people never bothered me. When my family got sick … I just wanted to take care of them and make them feel better.”

Now a junior at Middle Georgia State College, she’s on her way to earning a bachelor’s degree in nursing, which she hopes to receive in December of 2016.

Goodman said that when she entered college, “I didn’t know if I’d be smart enough” to be a nurse.

The curriculum includes courses like anatomy and physiology, which routinely proves to be a difficult academic hurdle for students. But a biology professor encouraged her to pursue her dream, and she got an A in her first A&P course.

Goodman is well-spoken and poised, owing at least in part to being home schooled and participation in community theater. She was an impressive candidate when she applied for assistance from the Middle Georgia State Foundation, which awarded her two scholarships.

“The scholarships – with the HOPE scholarship and these from the foundation – it’s been wonderful. I haven’t had to work,” she said. She finds the potential of receiving financial assistance motivating.

“(Scholarships) encourage you to try harder. When my GPA is such and such, and I work really hard and apply myself, then it’s possible that I could get rewarded for that extra work. … I’m hoping to get out of school debt free!”

Goodman, who has two brothers who attended Middle Georgia State, said the college’s affordability and its proximity to her home were obvious draws when she was looking for a college. Those factors may have gotten her here, but something else made her want to stay.

“The biggest thing for me was just meeting the faculty,” she said. “They always have time for you. It doesn’t matter what they have to do … they take time out of their busy schedules and they help you. Everybody has that feel of caring.”

And she cares about those who have cared for her.

“I’d like to thank the people who provided the scholarships, the people who go out and work and try to make this college a success, and the faculty. … Now that I’m in the nursing program, though it’s hard, I feel like it’s a possibility … (and) I’ve worked to make that happen. I don’t think I would have been brave enough to do it by myself.”

“This is a chance for students to get the experience of a great trip without the cost associated with traditional study abroad.”
Living History Tour: A New Take on Study “Abroad”

Niels Eichhorn, assistant professor of history, will lead the “College on the Move” living history tour this summer.

Niels Eichhorn likens it to a study abroad trip, even though the students participating won’t actually travel abroad.

But, oh, the places they will go this summer as part of Eichhorn’s “College on the Move” initiative, which he organized to give students a living history tour of the antebellum South.

“This is a chance for students to get the experience of a great trip without the cost associated with traditional study abroad,” said Eichhorn, 30, an assistant professor of history at Middle Georgia State who specializes in the Civil War. “They’ll get to see some of the places they study about in the classroom.”

To help make his living history tour a reality, Eichhorn applied for funding from the Middle Georgia State College Foundation. The Foundation allocated funds to help defray travel costs for the living history trip, which Eichhorn estimates at $1,150 per student.

“They’ll work hard but it will be great entertainment, too,” Eichhorn said.

Eichhorn planned the 16-day trip, which departs June 9, for a maximum of 12 students. The trip will be by college van, which Eichhorn will drive. The journey begins in Macon and makes its way through Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama and north Florida.

Stops are numerous and include the Old Governor’s Mansion, Alexander Stephens State Park, Kennesaw Mountain Battlefield, Chickamauga & Chattanooga National Military Park, Shiloh National Military Park, James K. Polk House, Vicksburg National Military Park, National Civil War Naval Museum and Andersonville Historic Site.

Students will have required reading on the history of each location and engage in discussion while traveling in the van. “The students will gain valuable insights into historic ways of life by visiting the places where people actually resided,” Eichhorn said. “They will gain a better understanding for military campaigns and battles by visiting battlefields. The overall goal is to make history a livable experience that goes beyond book learning.”

To participate in the living history tour program, students must enroll in two courses – Civil War and Reconstruction, and Old South and Public Memory – and complete research papers and other assignments over the first and second summer sessions.

Eichhorn wants history majors who make the trip to observe curators and other people at work at the landmarks they visit so they can see how versatile their education can be.

“I want them to think bigger about what they can do with their degree,” he said.

Eichhorn hopes the living history tour becomes an annual event, but he dreams of a variety of locations.

“Eventually I’d like to do the Lewis and Clark route,” he said. “St. Louis to Portland.”

For more information about the living history tour, email Eichhorn at niels.eichhorn@mga.edu.
Change in college, change in major led alum to new career

The path to one’s station in life is rarely a straight one. Decisions are made and options are chosen that sometimes don’t work out. Circumstances change, priorities change, people change.

Keisha Tennyson Dudley, a 1999 graduate of what is now known as Middle Georgia State College, is an example of someone who has successfully traveled a circuitous path en route to a good job and a great career.

A native of Roberta who spent most of her early years growing up in Macon, Dudley thought at the time that she’d enjoy leaving Middle Georgia to attend college. She enrolled at a university in South Georgia, but later came home “after realizing being so far from home in a small city like Valdosta wasn’t really for me.”
Back at home, she knew she had to continue working toward a college degree so she enrolled at (now) Middle Georgia State College. “The college offered flexible options for my schedule, and I was able to work part-time while going to school.”

She found the college was the right place at the right time.

“[Middle Georgia State College] gave me what I needed at that time in my life. I was still in self-discovery mode, trying to decide what I wanted to be and how I would achieve those goals. I started my college career as a nursing major,” she said, but she later realized “that wasn’t exactly the path for me. … I knew that I wanted to do something where I could dress up in business attire every day.”

She said her academic advisor explained the college’s many degree options. “It was clear that a degree in business was the best opportunity for me. It was easy to change my major (to business management), and I haven’t looked back ever since!”

That degree helped pave the way for her first job in Atlanta. “Without that degree, I know I would not have been hired. I had been applying for a number of jobs prior to completion of my degree and did not have much luck,” she said. “Once I was able to say that I had a degree, the possibilities were endless.” She landed a job with a major bank in Atlanta, and that launched her career.

She has since added a second degree and she’s still in Atlanta. But now she serves as vice president of marketing and development for Whitefoord, a non-profit organization that focuses on family health and education. She leads the organization’s fundraising efforts and also manages Whitefoord’s marketing and external communications efforts.

She’s but one example of a traditional aged student who persevered as she changed locations and altered her personal goals. And she’s someone who, like so many other alums of the college, recognizes the importance of earning a college degree. “I will always be grateful to Macon State College for my education;” she said. “Although I had to make many sacrifices to complete my degree, it was well worth it in the end.”
